"Green Games" became a calling card for the 19th Asian Games, which were held from Sept. 23 to Oct. 8 in Hangzhou and five other cities in Zhejiang.

To make the Games the world's first waste-free sporting event, green energy sources were used at all 56 competition venues (场馆).

Some of the renewable (可再生的) electricity used at the venues was solar energy (光能源), transmitted from areas such as Qinghai and Gansu. Another source was wind power which was made in areas including the Xinjiang Uygur autonomous region.

A digital management platform was also started to help achieve carbon neutrality (碳中和) during the Asian Games. On the platform, digital technologies were used for managing carbon emissions from venues in the six cities where the Games were held. The technologies included data collection and emissions reduction and evaluation.

Among all of the Games' 56 competition venues, just 12 were newly built. The rest were existing facilities repaired as part of the organizers' mission of sustainability (持续性).

The Shangcheng Sports Centre Stadium, the venue used for soccer events at the Games, was first built in 2019. During the venue's renovation (翻新), its solar-film ceiling and spectator seating—both of which had been used for 14 years but remained in good condition—were kept after being scientifically assessed. This helped to reduce building costs by nearly 8 million yuan.

The race track of Chun'an Jieshou Sports Centre's velodrome (自行车赛场) was covered with 374 interchangeable components which can continue to use after the competition ended.

Zhejiang also improved public entry to the venues and hosted sports events in them. During the one-year delay of the Games due to the Covid-19, the venues were put aside but still kept in use. Since May 2022, all of the available venues have received 10 million visits, allowing the public to experience the world-class facilities.

These venues will continue to be used for sports and public fitness after the Games. Venue owners and operators have developed post-games plans for 51 venues.

48. What was the goal of the 19th Asian Games in terms of waste management?

49. How many of the competition venues were newly built for the 19th Asian Games?
A.12 B.56 C.51 D. The article does not mention it.
50. Why did the organizers keep the solar-film ceiling and spectator seating of the Shangcheng Sports Centre Stadium?

Imagine you're taking an exam, and that you find it difficult to answer those questions. And time is running out. Would you waste the little chance that you get to cheat? Probably, some of us have once cheated in the test.

Certainly, it's not correct. It's important to follow the rules because the world would turn into a total mess without rules. However, with time passing by and the development of the society, some rules have become barriers to people's success. A famous person once said, "We have so many rules in life about everything. But it's impossible to be a creator if you're too well-behaved. You have to think outside the box." Some rules are created to restrain people, and some become old and boring. So sometimes, it's okay to break the rules. In 1823, William Webb Ellis was a pupil at Rug-by school. He was tired of playing football in the old way, so the player took the ball in his arms and ran with it during a school football match. In this way, he started a new sport: rugby (英式足球), named after his school.

Since you've already known why someone wants to break the rules, now you need to learn how to do it.

Learn the rules first. Qi Baishi was a talented Chinese artist, but he spent much time learning traditional drawing and painting skills before he found his own styles. Master it before you break it—that's what you can learn from great minds.

Evaluate if the result is worth it. Each person has his own values. Before breaking the rules, think over whether it will go against your values. And the moment you decide to do that, you must be ready to have a wise thought to face the bad results.

52. How does the author develop the passage?
A. By asking questions B. By introducing some facts
C. By telling stories D. By giving some examples

53. What does the author think about the rules?
 A. Rules are created to support people. B. All the rules go against our values.
 C. Rules don't become old and boring. D. Some rules can stop people's success.
54. What does the underline word "restrain" mean?
 A. Save. B. Control. C. Care. D. Trust.
55. The author uses the example of "Qi Baishi" to tell us _____.
 A. we should master the rules before we break them
 B. it's important to follow the rules
 C. we have to think outside the box
 D. why someone wants to break the rules
56. What is the best title for the passage?
 A. How to Break the Rules B. Ways to Follow the Rules
 C. Learn to Break the Rules D. Think Twice Before Breaking the Rules

Good morning, boys and girl. Today I'll talk about going online.

As we all know, the Internet can make our lives interesting and enjoyable. Many of us like going online very much because we can learn how to use the computer. We can learn English and read some newspapers and magazines to know more around us. It can make us clever in playing computer games. Also when we can send e-mails to our friends, they can get them at once. It can help us get in touch with people from all over the world.

But some students spend too much time playing computer games and some stay in the net bars all day and all night. Some girls even get to have boyfriends or some boys get to have girlfriends online. They write too many letters to each other. It takes them too much time to chat online so they do worse in their lessons and they don't study well any more. I think we mustn't get online when it is time for us to study. We can do it in summer or winter holidays. I think we should get online with our teachers or parents.

At the same time, if we have lots of free time, we can do some activities after school. We usually have activities from 4:50 to 5:50 in the afternoon. You can play basketball or football. We also have some interest groups in school, such as drawing, singing and dancing. We can go to the English corner on Monday afternoon. We hope we can spend more time on our subjects or on such activities that we can learn a lot from and less time on the Internet.
